- 1. Vaclay Kopecky, Communist Minister for Information, seems to have failed, at least temporarily, in his attempt to oust Dr. Ivo Duchacek from his post as chairman of the Constitutional Assembly's Foreign Affairs Committee. Although Kopecky had threatened that he would compel the Communist members of the committee to boycott all future meetings unless Duchacek resigned, not one Communist was absent when the committee met the last time.
- 2. While the Communists are critical of many of Duchacek's views, they are anxious to keep him as the committee chairman because, as they express it, "he has proved himself a politician with whom they can get along."
